Dear Director of Nursing Education:

I am a Nurse Educator with 30+ years of Registered Nursing (OB/GYN/Postpartum, Occupational Health) experience in hospital settings teaching correct medical procedures and protocol while inspiring accountability, quality, efficiency, and patient advocacy based on nursing best practices and my own experiences. Please accept my resume for any Medical Instructor positions at your facility.

In all my Educator roles, I can say that:

The training curriculum I have designed and delivered reflects current medical knowledge as well as my clinical experiences, flavored by daily encounters with fellow human beings. One of several areas of practical and teaching expertise is Wound Care. My courses teach medical personnel to deliver controlled, intelligent, yet quick responses to medical emergencies. I have already been recertified in an advanced wound care course—Hyperbaric Chamber— this year.

I am a passionate, convincing communicator. I easily clarify technical topics for both technical and non-technical audiences that include physicians, RN, LVN, CNA, technical/administrative support staff, and patients and their families. I speak, read, and write Spanish well enough to assess and document patient conditions and empower patients and their families to make informed medical decisions. Also, I champion the use of state-of-art technology to expedite diagnosis and treatment. For example, I routinely photograph wounds with my cell phone and relayed the photo to the surgeon's cell.

One key area I champion is Quality through Accountability. I recall an old saying, "Ethics is what happens when nobody is looking." I hope to instill in our nurses that somebody is always looking—moreover, that somebody always cares—even where human life is not at risk. Perhaps it is in recalling my own experiences with an outstanding preceptor that drives my pursuit of excellence: She mentored me so well that I advanced directly to the rank of RN almost immediately after being hired.

I would enjoy meeting with you to discuss ideas how to prepare your students and personnel for current and future medical challenges. You may contact me using this address, mobile telephone number, and e-mail between the hours of 8:00 a.m.–8:00 p.m. daily.

Sincerely yours,

Charlotte Z. Nurse, BSN, RN
